

Write a CGI program(s) that will take as input one filename. It should then print the file's contents into a textarea of a form. The user should be allowed to change the file however he or she chooses, and when they press the submit button, the new form data should be stored in the file.

Sample Run of the code:

